PETROGRAD ADMITS IT IS SOMEWHAT ALARMED

While Car's Armies Are Driving the Germans the Turks Are Winning

WARSHIPS SHELL TURKS ON BLACK SEA

Co-operating With the Land Forces the Ships Bombard the Enemy, Inflicting Heavy Loss—Venice Hears That Craiova is Burning—Berlin Admits That People in Vicinity of the Border are Leaving Their Homes in Fear of Russian Invasion—Germans and Austrians Forced to Fall Back to Their Own Frontiers.

(By International News Service)
Petrograd, Nov. 17.—Russia warships co-operating with land forces are bombarding the positions of the Turk along the Black sea coast, the admiralty announced. The ships shelled the Turks, inflicting heavy losses.

Turks Suffered.
While the Russian army is successful in its drive against the Germans, the situation on the Caucasus front, where the Turks have been successful, is causing anxiety. The strength of the Ottoman forces shows that Turkey had been preparing for war, and work was being done for many weeks.

Alarm Felt.
The news that the Russians were driven from the position of Kopitok, which with the heavy expenditure of men, caused alarm. It is asserted that the Russian retreat was made in good order and that the troops were reinforced by the army in the Caucasus.

Craiova Reported Burning.
Rome, November 17.—The Giornale d'Italia publishes a despatch from Venice which says that Craiova, capital of Galicia, is burning and that its inhabitants are fleeing.

Overcoming All Obstacles.
A special despatch from Petrograd to the Giornale d'Italia says that the Russian army is overcoming all obstacles, both the difficulty of the passes and the desperate resistance of the Austrians. Craiova is entirely besieged on the northeast. A section from Przemyśl has been repulsed by Russian artillery and cavalry, which inflicted severe losses on the Austrians.

Russians Advancing.
London, Nov. 17.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram company from Amsterdam says:

"The sub-director of Malmedy, West Prussia, has issued a proclamation of warning that the Russian army is advancing between Thorn and Soldan (East Prussia) but that on the German side of the frontier it is expected it will be met by strong force, which will soon force it into a decisive battle."

People Leaving Their Homes.
Berlin, via London, Nov. 17.—Germany again is under the sign of the Russian danger, to quote the astrological metaphor frequently used by the Germans.

"The combined German and Austrian armies which, by a well timed and well executed change of front and with timely reinforcements, were able to sweep through Poland to the line of the Vistula, threatening Warsaw and Ivanograd, were in turn outflanked by the command and have fallen back to their own frontier."

"Timid inhabitants of the border regions are leaving their homes for the interior. Professional pessimists draw long faces and a certain amount of disquietude is being manifested by civilian circles in Berlin."

Vladivostok, via Denmark, November 17.—The Russian warships announced today the capture of Valparaiso and Obnovat, two important towns. The situation is serious.

"In the southern war zone the Russian troops do not allow even to occupy the trenches they had captured. Near Valparaiso the enemy was thrown back and some Russian troops, the Austrians, reached the Koutars river and occupied Valparaiso and Obnovat."

CHIMNEY FIRE CALLS OUT THE WEST SIDE FIREMEN

An alarm of fire about 8 o'clock last evening startled the citizens and gave them considerable worry. There was a very strong wind at the time. The alarm was from the Third ward and the hose company of that ward was soon on the scene, discovering that the chimney on the house of Clark Reed, on Merrill street, was blazing and that all danger was over before the firemen arrived.

Will Hold a Lunch.
Mrs. L. T. Gord's circle of the Ladies Aid society of the Lutheran church will hold a tea and cake sale in the basement of the church on Thursday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 o'clock, at which your patronage is desired.

Our Help to Belgium Welcomed

(By International News Service)
Berlin, Nov. 17.—The German government today issued a formal denial of the reports in the foreign press of Germany's refusal to permit American aid to Belgium. On the contrary the government is highly pleased with the plans made. Ambassador von Bernstorff has been so instructed.

The report had been extensively circulated that the Germans had refused to permit goods sent to the starving Belgians to be delivered in Belgium.

Carranza States His Conditions of Retirement

(By International News Service)
Washington, Nov. 17.—General Carranza has made known to Provisional President Gutierrez the conditions under which he will retire, and the latter has approved them, according to a dispatch just received by the department from Consul Sullivan.

This paves the way to a calm situation, although nothing is known at the White House regarding Villa's position.

Washington, Nov. 17.—President Wilson today sharply emphasized the fact that the United States will not pay over the million dollars collected in custom duties at Vera Cruz until a stable government has been established in Mexico, but will hold the money until all possibility of confiscation has been eliminated.

The president indicated to cabinet members that, regardless of developments in Mexico, the United States will adhere to its plan of evacuating Vera Cruz on November 23, and emphasize the fact that requisite guarantees will be given all factions. No final word has come from Carranza and Villa as to whether they intend to leave Mexico.

SECRETARY HOUCK MAY LOSE OFFICE

Abolition of Internal Secretaryship May be Directed by Voters

OFFICIALS WHOSE TERMS END

Next Governor Expected to Make Changes in a Number of Important Positions—Bigelow, Erick and Pomeroy are Men Whom the People Would Like to See Turned Out of Office.

Henry Houck, the first secretary of internal affairs to be elected to a third term, may be the last man to hold that office. In the legislature which will meet on the first Tuesday of January, passes a resolution adopted by the legislature of 1913, to submit to the people a proposition to amend the constitution so as to abolish the department of internal affairs and it should be ratified at the polls next November the department would go out of existence and its duties be apportioned among the forestry, agriculture and other branches of the state government.

Secretary Houck, who was elected for the first time in 1906, will begin his third term on the first Tuesday of May; whereas the governor and lieutenant governor, who were elected with him, will take the oath on January 19. Just what effect the ratification by the people of the amendment would have on the term of the secretary, no one on Capitol Hill appears to know, but the legislature would likely make the appropriate provision until the affairs could be transferred to other departments.

The list of recess appointments by the governor is being made up for confirmation by the next senate. In the list are a number of trustees, members of the various state boards and commissions and these major officials: John Price Jackson, commissioner of labor and industry; William H. Smith, commissioner of banking; Thomas Lynch Montgomery, state librarian; John C. Groome, superintendent of state police, and John Birkinbine, water supply commissioner.

Chief among officials whose term expire next year are: Secretary of the Commonwealth Robert McCall and Attorney General John C. Beck, the two so-called "personal appointments." Other officials whose terms end next year are Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, commissioner of health, February 1; N. B. Critchfield, secretary of the commonwealth, February 20; Dr. C. J. Marshall, state veterinarian, February 8; Dr. James D. Roderick, chief of mines, April 16; Charles Johnson, insurance commissioner, May 1; W. L. Schaffer, supreme court reporter, March 15; Thomas J. Stewart, adjutant general, January 19; E. M. Bigelow, highway commissioner, June 1; James N. Moore, chief legislative reference bureau, April 15; James Foust, dairy and food commissioner, and Dr. H. A. Surface, economic zoologist, April 16. Samuel C. Todd, executive controller, took office with the governor.

In 1917 the terms of Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, superintendent of public instruction; J. L. Baldwin, state marshal; N. R. Buller, commissioner of fisheries, and A. N. Pomeroy, superintendent of printing, will expire.

Ye Olde Folkes Concert

Will be given at the Eleventh Street Meeting house, Friday evening, November 10th. Sacred Hymns and Worldly Songs will be sung by those dressed in the styles of 16th century.

Admission 25 cents; Children, 15 cents.

DEPARTING AND MEYER MAY TILL CONGRESS OF NAVY

Washington, Nov. 17.—Representative Gardner, the vigorous advocate of a strong navy, is disappointed that the contemplated congressional hearing upon the inadequacy of the navy and navy will be widely comprehensive. Among those whom Mr. Gardner will call when the hearing provided in his resolution is adopted will be Charles D. Spurgeon, formerly Secretary of the Navy; Henry L. Stimson, formerly Secretary of War, and J. Bernard Walker, editor of a scientific magazine.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS WILL MEET THURSDAY

The committee having charge of the campaign for a membership of Class No. 17, of Trinity M. E. church, met Monday evening to receive the results of the contest. Class No. 17 gained a new member, making a total enrollment of 90, while Class No. 25, Capt. A. H. Woodward, won the contest with 56 new members, or an advantage of 8, with a total enrollment of 93.

The committee of the Class No. 17 resolved to congratulate the winners on their success and determined to hold a joint business and social meeting of their class, including old and new members, at the home of Mrs. John McCorkle, 410 Cherry street, at which every enrolled member of the class is expected to be present. In addition to other business to be transacted at the meeting at Mrs. McCorkle's home on the evening of Thursday, November 19, the time and place of holding a joint reception to the new members will be determined.

The contest between the two classes alone resulted in an addition of 104 new members, necessitating enlargement of the church building and the purchase of a new organ and a new piano. The contest was a very interesting one and the members of the Trinity Sunday school.

The National Order of Kings is preparing for their annual convention.

TAKING PICTURES A DIFFICULT TASK

Cameras Not Welcome in Countries Observing Neutrality

PHOTOGRAPHER'S EXPERIENCE

Succeeded in Snapping Some Good Views and Scenes, But Was Made Aware That His Presence in the Dutch Country Was Not Welcome—How He Outwitted Officers.

(By International News Service)
Flushing, Nov. 17.—The old adage has it that every picture tells a story but a photographer's experience has taught me that this does not necessarily mean the whole story. I have just made a tour of Holland in quest of pictures for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial and my experiences there have convinced me that it is easier to get pictures in a country where war is being waged than in a state whose neutrality renders the surveillance of the movements of strangers infinitely more stringent than any to which I have been subjected in Belgium or France.

With Belgium in the hands of the Germans I turned to Holland in the hope of finding a fruitful field of operations. The kindly Dutch are showing extraordinary and practical sympathy with the poor Belgian refugees but the Dutch authorities are taking no risks of being guilty of any breach of neutrality and, in passing I would tell you that the Dutch people, as a whole community are all on the side of the Allies. More than one million Belgians, all destitute and homeless have sought safety in Holland and it is hardly possible to tell in words the strain this has put upon the resources of this little country.

In Flushing it was impossible to get sleeping accommodation and a mattress in an attic was all I could find on my arrival there. Ordinary white bread is not to be found in the country and the supply of black bread is limited. I left Flushing the day after my arrival and travelled by train to Alkmaar where the German prisoners are interned. Alkmaar is situated on the western coast of Holland farthest from the German frontier. There are some hundreds of Germans in the compounds here and I was greatly impressed by their general cheerfulness, even when the weather was vile enough to sadden the most cheery optimist.

Evidently being interned in a Dutch compound is not at all a disagreeable experience. Each day squads of these prisoners are taken in parties of about fifty for long walks in the charge of two Dutch guards. The men are more or less placed on parole and they make no effort to escape for they are as far away from the German border as the Dutch authorities can put them. At this time of the year Holland is a dismal country for the "sea-fret" from the North sea and the Zuyder Zee covers the country with a haze which casts a sort of pall of depression all over the place. And, by the way, this haze is not beloved of the photographer. No permits are given by the Dutch authorities for the taking of photographs, but the officers are sometimes subject to an attack of temporary blindness.

I left Alkmaar for Enkhuizen and crossed the Zuyder Zee in a fishing smack to Stavoren, a journey which took three hours and was made in a wretched rain. Thence I proceeded to Leeuwarden where it was with a difficulty that I was not a spy. An early start next morning brought me to Groningen, on the German border where the English prisoners are located. My entry into this town was

Germans Forced to Abandon Their Trenches Because Of The Flood

FRENCH REPULSE TWO GERMAN ATTACKS

Allies Reported to Have Made Remarkable Progress at Arras and Lens—Attempts of the Germans to Cross the Canal Between Dixmude and Bixchoote Defeated by the Allies and Kaiser's Troops Driven Back Beyond the Bridges.

(By International News Service)
Paris, Nov. 17.—The great artillery duel between the Germans and allies along the front in Belgium, from the coast to Ypres, is increasing in violence, according to this afternoon's official statement.

The Germans have been forced to abandon part of their trenches by the flood. Two German attacks were repulsed and the allies made remarkable progress at Arras and Lens.

Last night's official communication adds nothing in the way of news, simply saying: "The situation is without modification." The text of yesterday afternoon's communication follows: "During the day of yesterday along the Yser canal, from Nieuport to the country up the river from Dixmude, the fighting was limited to artillery exchanges.

NORTH SEA CLOSED TO NEUTRALS BY ENGLAND

(By International News Service)
London, Nov. 17.—A sensation was caused this afternoon by the announcement of Premier Asquith in the house of commons that the government had decided to declare the North sea a military area. This is a severe blow to neutral countries, Denmark, Holland, which get imports on ships are compelled to transverse the North sea.

The government decided that the move was necessary to prevent Germany receiving supplies. The protest of neutral countries was ignored. It is feared Britain's action may have a serious effect in Holland. No one is now greatly surprised if she were to join Germany.

Premier stated that oil and copper would hereafter be contraband of war. If subjects of the countries at war with England are found on neutral vessels they will be liable to be held as war prisoners, the premier said.

Murder of Miner at Liberty

(By International News Service)

It is believed Shelcorn was killed in a fight and detectives will make an investigation.

Rich Pittsburgh Church Badly Damaged by Fire

(By International News Service)
Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—Fire this morning caused a loss of $50,000 to the Second United Presbyterian church.

Although the firemen worked hard nothing was saved from the building but the parson's library. The vestry, auditorium and Sunday school rooms were burned out. The congregation is one of the wealthiest in Pittsburgh, some of the members being widely known.

Good evening! What's your private opinion of this sort of Indian summer?

Also, do your Christmas shopping early and avoid confusion.

Here's to the rosy-cheeked girl who doesn't get her roses from the drug store.

Always in the winter it is well to plan what you want to do when spring comes.

Pride goes before a fall, 'tis said. This year fall has something to be proud of.

Lord Roberts was an Irishman, a fact that should not be forgotten by Englishmen.

Clearfield was placed permanently on the map when one of its banks joined the federal reserve bank.

Still, we ought to be glad there are so many lame ducks; they might have been elected to office, you know.

The Ryan Democrats are to be recognized by the Democratic leaders after the election has been lost to the Democrats.

Bridge weddings are the latest. The bridegroom plays the prospector to see if the wedding fee shall be fifty cents or five dollars, eh?

Those districts adjacent to Clearfield and which share the honors bestowed upon the town should be part and parcel of the borough.

One of the results of the European war, according to a Berlin newspaper, will be the general use of the German language. Wot socks it?

The Kaiser has shown the upright ends of his mustache and now looks less as if he were challenging the world to knock the chip from his shoulder.

Southern congressmen declare that the administration owes the south much more than has been given it. Never fear; Wilson will take care of the south.

Also, the surrender of President Wilson to England in the matter of Panama canal tolls must have had something to do with the result of the election.

Under the public utilities law a plumber could be arrested for adding ten inches to a water spout without sending the specifications to the public service commission.

Southern Democrats are opposed to equal suffrage in their states because they do not want the colored woman's vote added to their present trouble of nullifying the colored man's vote.

A Mitchell Palmer is to be taken care of, which will cause the Ryan Democrats some joy, because it will take Mitch out of his present position as boss of the Democratic party in this state.

Even the Indians of the plains have denounced the war in Europe. Is this because the war interferes with the wild west shows abroad or because the red men actually look upon bloodshed with horror?

Clearfield's Women's club must be different from similarly named clubs elsewhere, since none of the mean things the newspaper publishers are saying about women's clubs apply to the local organization.

What makes an editor feel good is to have some really intelligent citizen tell him he ought to print something which appeared in his paper at least a week previously. It shows that the citizen is anything but a close reader of the paper.

It is said that the American troops are to be withdrawn from Vera Cruz next week. President Wilson might tell the people of the United States what the troops were sent to Mexico for—to protect American citizens or to protect Great Britain?

REPEAL THE LAW

One of the first things the next legislature should do is to repeal the law creating the public utilities commission. There never was any cause for the creation of this commission, and since its membership has been made up of men who never have been in touch with the people and do not have any consideration for the people's welfare, the sooner the commission goes out of existence the better. It looks to most people as if the commission was brought into being for no other purpose than to harass municipalities and private corporations and to add the public service corporations to the list of the public.

It was supposed by the people that the public utilities commission would assist them in securing justice from extortion from public service companies, but the operation of the commission has proven that the private individual with a grievance might as well submit to injustice from the public service corporation as to expect relief at the hands of the commission. The law creating the commission actually prohibits anything like justice being done for the relief of the complaining citizen. Appeals to the commission for relief are useless unless the complainant has plenty of money and time to fight for his rights.

So many instances similar to that chronicled in the Progress yesterday about the Sunbury case and that in Clearfield have come to hand that the disgust of the people over the autocratic rulings of the public service commission has turned into anger that cannot be appeased except by the prompt repeal of the law creating the commission. There is a sufficient number of members of the legislature who are aware of the uselessness of the public utilities commission and who recognize the evils which flow from the operation of the public utility law to bring about the repeal of this obnoxious law, and the members from Clearfield county should unite with others in wiping this unpopular act from the statute books.

OBREGON'S LATEST

General Obregon, one of the numerous leaders in Mexico, has suggested to the Aguas Calientes convention a new plan for bringing peace to Mexico. This scheme is to have both Carranza and Villa agree to leave Mexico for some other land. Obregon is said to have assurances from Washington that if these two "generals" will consent to this plan the United States will protect the lives and property of foreigners in the republic. If Obregon has such assurances from President Wilson it is difficult to see how the president is going to make his guarantee good.

It is very doubtful if Villa will agree to anything of this kind. He believes that he has won the right to remain in Mexico and help form the new government. Carranza is a horse of another color, and might be persuaded to leave his native land to its fate if he were to be handed a full purse upon taking his departure. If both of these disturbing elements shall be removed from the scene in Mexico what assurance has the United States government that other leaders will not proceed to start other revolutions and menace the foreign residents of the country? To carry out his promise the president would have to send more American troops to Mexico and repeat the blunders of the past year.

SIX SMALL SMILES

Effect of the Cause.
"Won't your wife sing for us?"
"Sure; I just asked her not to."
Philadelphia Ledger.

Corrected.
"I understand you began your life as a newsboy," observed the friend smilingly.

"No," replied the millionaire.
"Someone has been fooling you. I began life as an infant!"—New York Times.

Awful Outlook

"Opera singers may enlist in this European war."
"Well, the slaughter will be dreadful if they turn upon the enemy the ferocity they commonly display toward one another."—Kansas City Journal.

Some Differences

Johnnie (puzzled as to how to pronounce the name of an explorer).
Say, father, do you pronounce K-n-u-d with a long or a short "u"?
Father (who, of course, doesn't know).—

know)—Oh, it doesn't make any difference.
Johnnie—Well, I guess it makes a good bit of difference whether a man is nud or nude up in the arctic regions.
—Penn State Froth.

Generous Consideration.
"Have you said your prayers?" asked the mother.
"Of course," replied the child.
"And did you ask to be made a better little girl?"
"Yes. And I put in a word for you and father, too."—Washington Star.

Sartorial Advantage.
"There is something very picturesque about the Scotch costume."
"Yes. And it's economical, too. A man doesn't have to bother about keeping his trousers pressed."—Washington Star.

PEACE SONG

We are longing for the dawning of the day when war shall cease, When all over the earth's surface there shall reign the Prince of Peace; Then tyranny and greed for gain shall suffering ones release; Let Peace go marching on!

Let those who war would favor heed the mother's moans and tears, Let them think of orphaned children, wives whose lives are spent in fears, Of waste and ruin war has wrought through long and bitter years, Let Peace go marching on!

Send home the absent warriors, their vacant chairs await, Return unto the foundries the guns and armor plate, And use the men and money to build up home and state; Let Peace go marching on!

May friendly mediation settle all dispute and strife; May the ruler of each nation seek to save each subject's life, And receive the adoration of each mother, child and wife; Let Peace go marching on!

—Lucania Clark Shea in Our Dumb Animals.

A New Daughter

A new daughter arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Whitteman, at Punxsutawney Saturday. The parents and Uncle Horace, of Clearfield, are getting along as well as could be expected.

GIRL VICTIM OF HYDROPHOBIA BITTEN YEAR AGO

Miss Grace Polhemus

New York, Nov. 17.—The most remarkable case of hydrophobia on record is that of Miss Grace Polhemus, thirteen years old, who is now in the worst stages of the dread malady. A newly discovered serum—a combination of quinine and urea hydrochloride—has failed to make any appreciable change in the condition of the little patient. It was November 19, 1913, that she was bitten by a cat she picked up on the porch of her home and tenderly fondled.

Protect Your Health by Pasteurizing Milk

The prevalence of the foot and mouth disease as reported among cattle in various sections of Pennsylvania may effect the dairy herds. Should these become infected there is danger of the transference of the disease from infected animals to human beings through the milk. As the records in this state show this possibility Dr. Samuel Dixon, commissioner of health, has issued the following warning: "The foot and mouth diseases which is known to the medical world as aphthous fever, is highly infectious in cattle and manifests itself by a rising temperature and the appearance of blisters on the mucus membrane of the mouth, tongue and nose. The blisters are followed by ulcers; digestive disturbances are also common. Death seldom occurs in human beings. As a matter of protection against the possibility of infection the use of raw milk may be discontinued. A safety factor is to pasteurize the milk. Following is a simple method which may be used. "Place a saucer in a pan seven or eight inches in diameter and about the same height. Set the milk bottle in this. Remove the paper cap from the milk bottle. Pour in the milk a sufficient quantity to make warm water to half cover the bottle. Watch the water and as soon as it has boiled twenty minutes remove the bottle of milk and allow it to cool slowly. Never place the milk immediately upon the fire or the bottle may break. Seal the bottle with a new cap, a supply of which you can obtain from the milk man, and place the milk bottle where it will remain at a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. It must be kept cool and clean if it is to remain safe for use. If the milk supply is not received bottled secure a bottle of the same size and cork after sterilization."

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, waiting, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the furious pecking of a great organ above.

She had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irrevocable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; and, unconsciously, there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to wait her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones ried with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the law estate had vast holdings of land the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements.

But, these became momentarily stronger and more confident.

This, then, was the secret he had hungered to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stultified motionless—strongly enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated the descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers, feet, clucking feebly to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen money and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the stick-like hand upon his shoulder and shrunk back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As if from the path of some great visitant from the world beyond the grave, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, the father of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the usual, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged man standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to his eyes.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land. A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance flashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the altar in the hand of Seneca Trine, scattering the weapons even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doctored her mourning for a gown less somber and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse in charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt—in absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physicians lied—must soon regain consciousness. Kneeling beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer a tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window, where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something," Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness. "I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding, in fact—and kept it to myself, not knowing whether I ought to tell you or not."

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly, unhappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be it's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . See here . . ."

"Well?"

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably. "You see, he loved her so—I thought—I'm sure it would be best—if you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed but Judith. And that's skating so close to the truth that it makes no difference the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been killed."

After a long pause, the girl asked him quietly, "I understand. But is it possible you don't understand that, if I were to consent to this proposition, I lend myself to a deception which I must maintain through all my life to come—Alan would consider me his wife?"

"Well—but you see—you are his wife . . . Oh, don't think I'm off my bat. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. You are Alan's wife."

No listen to me. You remember that day in New York when you substituted for Rose, when Alan tried to elope with her, and you went with him to Jersey City, and stood up to be married by a preacher—named Wright—and Marrophat broke in just at the critical moment and busted up the party?"

"Well?" she demanded breathlessly.

Barcus produced a folded yellow paper from his coat pocket and proffered it.

"Read that. It was handed to me as best man, just before the ceremony. Seeing it was addressed to Alan and knowing he was in no frame of mind to be bothered by telegrams, I slipped it into my pocket and forgot all about it temporarily. When I came to find it, I took the liberty of reading it. But read it for yourself."

The typewritten lines of the long message blurred and ran together almost indecipherably in Judith's vision. None the less, she contrived to grasp the substance of its meaning.

"WHY DIDN'T YOU WIRE ME SOONER?" it ran: "MARRIAGE TO ROSE IMPOSSIBLE. REV. MR. WRIGHT INFORMED ME YOUR MARRIAGE TO JUDITH LAST WEEK HAD GONE TOO FAR WHEN MARROPHAT INTERRUPTED. JUDITH LEGALLY YOUR WIFE. WOULD HAVE ADVISED YOU SOONER HAD YOU LET ME KNOW WHERE TO ADDRESS YOU. HOPE TO HEAVEN THIS GETS TO YOU BEFORE TOO LATE."

The message was signed with the name of Alan's confidential man of business in New York.

When Judith looked up she was alone in the room, but for the silent patient on his couch.

Slowly, almost fearfully, she crept to his bedside and stood looking down into the face of her husband.

And while she looked Alan's lashes fluttered, his respiration quickened, a faint color crept into his pallid cheeks—and his eyes opened wide and looked into hers.

His lips moved and breathed a word of recognition:

"Judith!"

With a low cry of tenderness, the girl gank to her knees and encircled his head with her arms.

"Judith," she whispered, hiding her face in his bosom, "Judith is no more . . ."

A pause; and then the feeble voice: "Then, if I was mistaken, if you aren't Judith, you must be Rose—my wife!"

She said steadily: "I am your wife."

His hands fumbled with her face, closed upon her cheeks, lifted her head until her eyes must look into his.

And for many minutes he held her so, looking deep into the soul of the woman.

Then quietly he said: "I know . . ."

THE END.

STORM WRECKS EXHIBITS AT PENN STATE COLLEGE

State College, Nov. 16.—Following the hoodoo that struck the football team of the Penn State college on Friday, the 13th, a violent windstorm late Friday night swept over the agricultural fair grounds, demolishing five large tents and destroyed the exhibits they sheltered. This show, which was to have been the feature of the second day of the Pennsylvania Day celebration, was immediately cancelled.

The students of the agricultural school, under whose auspices the fair was to have been held, were dismayed Saturday morning when they came to the fair grounds and found cabbage, candy and corn from wrecked exhibits scattered over the field. The debris was weighed down with corn cobs and poles. Interest of visitors and student body immediately shifted to the horticultural show of fruit and vegetables in the new hall, the cultural building. There, in charge of the Crab Apple club, of the agricultural school, were exhibited thousands of prize specimens of apples, pears, and vegetables grown in the field and under glass. Prizes were awarded for exhibits from all over the state that measured up to a specified standard. Forty commercial growers of fruit and thirty vegetable growers were represented in the show.

At the new engineering building dedicated Saturday night at 8 p. m. was attracted by exhibition of electrical devices, "safety first" appliances and the automobile show. Hundreds of visitors thronged the building all day.

The cattle show, scheduled for today, was cancelled because of the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease.

OBITUARY

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Ursula Manahan were held in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ray Litz, on Dorey street, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. B. J. Hummel, pastor of the U. B. church, assisted by Rev. E. C. Reeve, of the Presbyterian church of Clearfield. Interment was made in the Mt. Joy cemetery by Undertaker Leavy.

Mrs. Manahan was the widow of Ephraim Manahan, who departed from this life about five years ago. She was aged 57 years 2 months 19 days. She was the mother of 15 children, 5 sons and 10 daughters. Three sons, William, Martin and Al, and 5 daughters, Sarepta, Ella, Jane, Cora and Lida, preceded her to the spirit world. The following children, 2 sons, Joseph, of Ohio, and Reuben, of Clearfield, and 5 daughters, Mrs. George Peflon, of Altoona; Mrs. Victor Condrict, of Sandy Ridge; Mrs. Daniel Litten, Mrs. Ray Litz and Mrs. Lillian Grafflin, all of Clearfield, with 20 grandchildren, and 3 sisters, Mrs. Gragler, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Richards, to mourn their loss, which is her gain.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready to use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Fine Mess of Venison

The editor of the Progress returns heartfelt thanks to the members of the Crystal Springs Rod and Gun club for a mess of venison received at his home last evening. From scrapple to venison is a long jump, but the editor is likely to survive the change of diet.

HE CLIMBED A TREE AND MISSED THE BUCK

A "other good story" comes from the Crooked Run club's camp. One of the hunters at that camp went out the other morning and thought he would be in a better position to see a deer if he were at an elevation, so he climbed a tree until he was about thirty feet from the ground. Here he waited patiently and was finally rewarded by seeing a handsome big buck trotting in his direction.

When the deer had approached within hitting distance the hunter fired at it, but unfortunately for him he missed and the buck disappeared in the bushes. The hunter was filled with chagrin that he had lost an opportunity to get a deer and his disappointment was almost great enough to lead him to return home at once. Because of his high standing in the community and through consideration for his family the name of the club's ing hunter is suppressed.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD COULDN'T RESIST BUCK'S CONFIDENCE

If the story coming from Larrys Creek is to be believed, Judge H. W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, who assisted Judge Bell in the local court some months ago, could have killed one of the biggest bucks ever seen in this section of the state, had he so desired. As the story is told, Judge Whitehead was one of a party of hunters and was stationed on a watch looking a few feet from him, down the runway, the judge's gun was raised and the deer kept on looking and stopped a little to nip at a twig. This was too much for his honor to stand and the gun was lowered. Again the deer looked at him and continued to nip a few choice bits. This continued for about five minutes and the judge raised his arm at the animal and in a manner that seemed to say, "I know you will give me a chance," the beautiful creature walked slowly away, and after a while disappeared down the runway.

PET DEER KILLED BY UNSPORTSMANLIKE HUNTER

What is considered by hunters in this vicinity as a most unsportsmanlike act was committed at Westover on the first day of the deer season. While the parties alluded to kept within the law, having hunters' licenses issued in Clearfield county, they killed one of the bucks bought from Mrs. Mosser last year by the state. At the time it was impossible to capture all of the deer bought and about twenty were driven over into Cambria county. Some of them went back, and have stayed around the park. Mr. Wagner, the keeper, says they were tamer than the ones in the park he saw every day, and killing one of them would be like killing a calf.

When the deer season came, the warden of Clearfield and John Johnson, of Patton, got together to devise some scheme to protect them, but as they were in Clearfield county and open to hunters, there was nothing to do, but they hoped the true sportsmen would not kill any of the deer.

The deer turned loose in the park were so tame all summer that they came into the farmers' barn yards with cows, but since the rabbit season came in, with the sound of shooting and the bay of hounds they are nervous.

soon noted by the authorities and a gendarme mounted on a bicycle was told off to watch my movements. I entered a cafe overlooking the barracks in which the British prisoners are housed and my sleuth-hound kept watch and ward at the door. How to get a picture was my chief thought and while the gendarme kicked his heels in the street I perched my camera on the ledge of an upper window and got the Britishers marching in the barrack square.

Leaving the cafe I went to the barracks, the gendarme following at a respectful distance. The officer refused to allow me to take pictures of the men, but they were anxious that I should not be sent away empty handed. Placing my camera on the ground and tilting it with a stone beneath the front end, I sat upon the machine and while ostensibly chatting to some of the sailors I was turning the handle and taking a picture of the squad of sailors running up and down the barrack yard, as they do for exercise for two hours each day.

This is the only recreation which the Britishers get. They are not allowed outside the confines of the barracks for they have refused to give their word of honor not to escape if the opportunity presents itself. Indeed, several of them, aided by friends outside, have succeeded in getting free.

The fact that I was taking a picture of the men at exercises was hidden from the officer-in-charge by the fact that the men gathered round me and screened my action, but it did not escape the attention of the gendarme and his intervention resulted in a request that I should leave the barrack yard without delay. I was politely told that the use of my camera was forbidden and a not very appetizing picture of a woman in a Dutch jail was verbally painted for my benefit. Still being under police supervision, Groningen ceased to appeal to me and under police escort I went to the railroad depot and took train for Flushing. A camera in Holland is an object and while not openly antagonistic, the authorities are determined to take no chances of allowing anything to happen which may reflect unfavorably upon their neutral status.

FELL FROM BRIDGE AND IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Anthony Yaruski, a miner employed at Curwensville, fell from the bridge at Susquehanna Sunday night about 10 o'clock, alighting on the ground and being instantly killed.

Yaruski and several companions were walking over the bridge when he tripped and fell. The body was taken to Ramey for interment. The dead man was about 27 years old and unmarried.

TWO PERSONS BURNED BY EXPLODING COAL OIL

Two persons in this county were severely burned by explosion of coal oil on Saturday. Philip Pifer, who resides between Luthersburg and Troutville, poured oil on a fire and the coal oil can exploded. He was badly burned about the face and arm.

Mrs. Charles Rogers, of DuBois, also tried to hasten a fire in the stove with coal oil on Saturday. Her hands and face were severely burned.

DELANAVAN'S COMET NOW VISIBLE TO NAKED EYE

Astronomers of the naval observatory, at Washington, are observing with keen interest the activities of Delavan's comet, which is now visible to the naked eye and will remain visible throughout November.

It may be seen about ten o'clock on clear nights at a point almost directly below the Pole star. At that time the comet is low in the sky. As the night wanes the comet rises higher in the heavens and in the early morning, between two and four, it reaches its greatest altitude above the horizon. Then, it is said, is the best time to observe the comet.

MANHATTAN PLAYERS DRAW BIG CROWD LAST NIGHT

The opera house was packed from pit to dome last evening for the opening show by the Manhattan Players, who will present a well known and successful show here every evening this week. Last evening they presented the four act sensational political comedy "The Man of the Hour." Vaudeville performances were given between the acts.

This evening they will play "Tess O' My Heart," a play from the popular back of that title, which has attracted wide attention and been considered one of the biggest successes in the theatrical stage in recent years.

SPORTS

PROMOTING PRIZE FIGHTING UNPROFITABLE BUSINESS

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Special to Progress.)

New York, Nov. 17.—The fight promoters ought to get together and form a little trust for the purpose of thwarting the fighters in their efforts to get about 99 44-100 percent of all the money that is taken in at the box office.

Promoting prize fighters in this thriving metropolis and in other cities is just as profitable as raising chickens in one's back yard, since the fighters started demanding guarantees and huge percentages.

Billy Gibson, connected with the fight game in New York for many years, quit it a short time ago. Gibson was regarded as the most successful fight promoter in the East—and also the shrewdest. Yet Gibson quit the game in disgust and gave out figures to show that the fighters get nearly all the money taken in at the gate and that the promoters get little and sometimes nothing for their efforts.

"Conditions are bad now but they will get worse," said Gibson. "Those fighters each day are yelling for bigger guarantees or bigger percentages."

Gibson staged the Willie Ritchie-Leach Cross fight in New York last winter. The house was packed. The fight drew nearly $22,000. Every body figured that this would mean a harvest for the promoters. When the fighters were paid, when the other bills were paid and when the State Boxing Commission got its share there was just about $1,000 left to be split among the members of the promoting club. And this $1,500 was their gross divvy. The club that Gibson was managing had spent hundreds of dollars to land that fight.

A new crowd of promoters headed by James J. Johnson is conducting fights in Madison Square Garden now. When they entered the field they figured that they could make money. They had the idea that bulky profits could be made "if the thing is run right." They thought other promoters had failed to grab profits because they didn't manage things as they should be managed.

Johnson staged Freddy Welsh-Ad Wolgast fight here. It was expected that the house would be about $20,000. Instead it was slightly over $13,000. The state's share was nearly $700. The cost of printing, hall hire, police hire, usher hire, publicity, advertising, electric lights and other incidentals was nearly $2,500 according to the best figure obtainable. Johnson put on some first class preliminaries. He had to pay about $400 for them. Welsh got $4573 for his share of the receipts and about $400 in addition "for railroad fare and training expenses." Wolgast got $3266 for his 23 or 24 minutes of work, and also he got about $200 to $300 for extra expenses.

Figure all these items up and you will find that Johnson and his associates, who worked night and day to get the bout and who worked about 20 hours a day after they got the bout so as to make its staging as perfect as possible, got just about enough net profit for their efforts to enable them to go out and buy themselves two or three soda waters and a nice, new 50 cent necktie.

ANNUAL DONATION DAY AT CLEARFIELD HOSPITAL

The Womens Auxiliary of the Clearfield hospital desires to call the attention of the public to the Eighth Annual Donation.

In view of the generous response to the recent "debt raising campaign" it has been thought best to omit, for this year, the customary house-to-house appeal for contributions. The need for renewed supplies is, however, always urgent, and such articles as jellies, canned fruits, groceries, coal, kindling wood, soap, old muslin, etc. will be gratefully welcomed at any time.

The week beginning November 23 has been fixed as donation week, and the different places of business have kindly offered to deliver at the hospital all goods purchased from them. All other donations may be left at the hospital or the following named residences: Mrs. Frank Fielding, South Front St.; Mrs. W. I. Swope, Second and Pine Sts.; Mrs. H. B. Powell, J. P. O'Loughlin, Front St.; Mrs. A. H. Woodard, Locust St.; Mrs. G. J. Moore, Hillside; Mrs. John Baratti, East End; Mrs. Ezra Brown, Weaver St.; Mrs. Alfred Graham, West Market St.; Mrs. Frank G. Harris, West Fourth ave.

Mrs. Frank Fielding, President, Womens Auxiliary.
Mrs. Blanche Biddle, Treasurer.

WARNING TO CITIZENS FROM BOARD OF HEALTH

Diphtheria is now epidemic in many of the smaller towns near by; Ronksman, Glen Richy, Allport and Blooming are affected. It will therefore be wise for those persons visiting these places from Clearfield to use every precaution not to come into contact with cases of diphtheria and avoid contracting the disease or carrying infectious material. The only two cases of infectious disease reported in the borough in the past two months have been diphtheria. We should use every precaution to avoid the spread of this malady.

The toilet of the nose and throat should be carefully attended to. If there are coughs and colds, the throat should be treated. Irritation of the throat and inflamed tonsils should receive attention, as such mucous membranes furnish an excellent soil upon which the diphtheria germs will rapidly multiply and cause the membrane to form, with full development of the accompanying symptoms. Where doubt exists, call your family physician early. Fear of quarantine should not influence you. A physician will not suggest quarantine unless he conscientiously believes it necessary. We should all be willing to abide by the quarantine measure as this offers our chief weapon in the prevention of general epidemics. During the public health terms contagious disease may become epidemic in an incredibly short time. It therefore requires the utmost vigilance to arrest any apparent outbreak. We ask the assistance of every citizen in this most laudable undertaking.

By Board of Health of CLEARFIELD BOROUGH.

RAILROAD

BIG STEEL BRIDGE IS PLACED IN POSITION

With no interruption to traffic, a 450 ton steel bridge on the Charlotte Boulevard, Rochester, N. Y., over the Belt line of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway, was placed in position at midnight, November 10.

The new bridge, which carries the boulevard over the railroad tracks, has a span of 52 feet and including a sidewalk, is 43 feet wide. The floor of the bridge was paved with concrete, sand and brick before the bridge was placed in position. The bridge was constructed by the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway company alongside of the old structure and at midnight was drawn into place by steam winches, in less than half an hour.

When the abutments of the old structure have been cleared away, there will be room for three tracks under the boulevard, the extra track being demanded by growing traffic on the Belt Line. The old bridge, which was built in 1889, weighed 16,000 pounds, while the steel work alone, in the new bridge, weighs 147,917 pounds.

The bridge, together with the trolley bridge, which was placed at the same location some ten days ago, gave employment to a large gang of men for several months and to the credit of those in charge, be it said, not a man was hurt on the job.

Fare Increase Justified.

Authority has been granted to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the Central railroad of New Jersey by the Interstate Commerce commission to charge a higher rate for through passenger tickets from New York to the west than the aggregate of the intermediate fares to certain designated points. The through fares, in any event, are not to exceed those established by the Pennsylvania railroad and from the same points the fares, thus adjusted, will be on a basis of two and a half cents a mile. The through rate from New York to Chicago was recently increased; the new rates authorized are to make intermediate fares conform to that basis.

CORRESPONDENCE

CLEARFIELD R. F. D. NO. 5.

Misses John Stone, Geo. Litz and Edward Brown will leave on Tuesday for the mountains where they will spend a few days deer hunting.

Craiova Reported Burning.
Rome, November 17.—The Giornale d'Italia publishes a despatch from Venice which says that Craiova, capital of Galicia, is burning and that its inhabitants are fleeing.

Overcoming All Obstacles.
A special dispatch from Petrograd to the Giornale d'Italia says that the Russian warships are overcoming all obstacles, both the difficulty of the passage and the desperate resistance of the Austrians. Craiova is entirely besieged on the northeast. A section from Przemyśl has been repulsed by Russian artillery and cavalry, which inflicted severe losses on the Austrians.

Russians Advancing.
London, Nov. 17.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram company from Amsterdam says:

"The sub-director of Malmedy, West Prussia, has issued a proclamation of warning that the Russian army is advancing between Thorn and Soldan (East Prussia) but that on the German side of the frontier it is expected it will be met by strong force, which will soon force it into a decisive battle."

SECRETARY HOUCK MAY LOSE OFFICE

Abolition of Internal Secretaryship May be Directed by Voters

OFFICIALS WHOSE TERMS END

Next Governor Expected to Make Changes in a Number of Important Positions—Bigelow, Erick and Pomeroy are Men Whom the People Would Like to See Turned Out of Office.

Henry Houck, the first secretary of internal affairs to be elected to a third term, may be the last man to hold that office. The legislature which will meet on the first Tuesday of January, passes a resolution adopted by the legislature of 1913, to submit to the people a proposition to amend the constitution so as to abolish the department of internal affairs and it should be ratified at the polls next November the department would go out of existence and its duties be apportioned among the forestry, agriculture and other branches of the state government.

Secretary Houck, who was elected for the first time in 1906, will begin his third term on the first Tuesday of May; whereas the governor and lieutenant governor, who were elected with him, will take the oath on January 19. Just what effect the ratification by the people of the amendment would have on the term of the secretary, no one on Capitol Hill appears to know, but the legislature would likely make the appropriate provision until the affairs could be transferred to other departments.

The list of recess appointments by the governor is being made up for confirmation by the next senate. In the list are a number of trustees, members of the various state boards and commissions and these major officials: John Price Jackson, commissioner of labor and industry; William H. Smith, commissioner of banking; Thomas Lynch Montgomery, state librarian; John C. Groome, superintendent of state police, and John Birkinbine, water supply commissioner.

Chief among officials whose term expires next year are: Secretary of the Commonwealth Robert McCall and Attorney General John C. Baker, the two so-called "personal appointments." Other officials whose terms end next year are Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, commissioner of health, February 1; N. B. Critchfield, secretary of the commonwealth, February 20; Dr. C. J. Marshall, state veterinarian, February 8; Dr. James D. Roderick, chief of mines, April 16; Charles Johnson, insurance commissioner, May 1; W. L. Schaffer, supreme court reporter, March 15; Thomas J. Stewart, adjutant general, January 19; E. M. Bigelow, highway commissioner, June 1; Samuel B. Rambo, superintendent of public grounds and buildings, June 1; James N. Moore, chief legislative reference bureau, April 15; James Foust, dairy and food commissioner, and Dr. H. A. Surface, economic zoologist, April 16. Samuel C. Todd, executive controller, took office with the governor.

In 1917 the terms of Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, superintendent of public instruction; J. L. Baldwin, state marshal; N. R. Buller, commissioner of fisheries, and A. N. Pomeroy, superintendent of printing, will expire.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS WILL MEET THURSDAY

The committee having charge of the campaign for a membership of 100,000, will meet on Thursday, Nov. 19, at 8 o'clock, to receive the results of the contest. Class No. 14, girls, is now meeting, making a total enrollment of 90, while Class No. 25, Capt. A. H. Woodward, won the contest with 56 new members, or an advantage of 8, with a total enrollment of 93.

The committee of the Class No. 17 resolved to congratulate the winners on their success and determined to hold a joint business and social meeting of their class, including old and new members, at the home of Mrs. John McCord, 410 Cherry street, at which every enrolled member of the class is expected to be present. In addition to other business to be transacted at the meeting at Mrs. McCord's home on the evening of Thursday, November 19, the time and place of holding a joint reception to the new members will be determined.

The contest between the two classes alone resulted in an addition of 104 new members, necessitating enlargement of the room in their accommodation. The contest was a spirit of rivalry and interest in the Trinity Sunday school.

TAKING PICTURES A DIFFICULT TASK

Cameras Not Welcome in Countries Observing Neutrality

PHOTOGRAPHER'S EXPERIENCE

Succeeded in Snapping Some Good Views and Scenes, But Was Made Aware That His Presence in the Dutch Country Was Not Welcome—How He Outwitted Officers.

(By International News Service)

Flushing, Nov. 17.—The old adage has it that every picture tells a story but a photographer's experience has taught me that this does not necessarily mean the whole story. I have just made a tour of Holland in quest of pictures for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial and my experiences there have convinced me that it is easier to get pictures in a country where war is being waged than in a state whose neutrality renders the surveillance of the movements of strangers infinitely more stringent than any to which I have been subjected in Belgium or France.

With Belgium in the hands of the Germans I turned to Holland in the hope of finding a fruitful field of operations. The kindly Dutch are showing extraordinary and practical sympathy with the poor Belgian refugees but the Dutch authorities are taking no risks of being guilty of any breach of neutrality and, in passing I would tell you that the Dutch people, as a whole community are all on the side of the Allies. More than one million Belgians, all destitute and homeless have sought safety in Holland and it is hardly possible to tell in words the strain this has put upon the resources of this little country.

In Flushing it was impossible to get sleeping accommodation and a mattress in an attic was all I could find on my arrival there. Ordinary white bread is not to be found in the country and the supply of black bread is limited. I left Flushing the day after my arrival and travelled by train to Alkmaar where the German prisoners are interned. Alkmaar is situated on the western coast of Holland farthest from the German frontier. There are some hundreds of Germans in the compounds here and I was greatly impressed by their general cheerfulness, even when the weather was vile enough to sadden the most cheery optimist.

Evidently being interned in a Dutch compound is not at all a disagreeable experience. Each day squads of these prisoners are taken in parties of about fifty for long walks in the charge of two Dutch guards. The men are more or less placed on parole and they make no effort to escape for they are as far away from the German border as the Dutch authorities can put them. At this time of the year Holland is a dismal country for the "sea-fret" from the North sea and the Zuyder Zee covers the country with a haze which casts a sort of pall of depression all over the place. And, by the way, this haze is not beloved of the photographer. No permits are given by the Dutch authorities for the taking of photographs, but the officers are sometimes subject to an attack of temporary blindness.

I left Alkmaar for Enkhuizen and crossed the Zuyder Zee in a fishing smack to Stavoren, a journey which took three hours and was made in a wretched rain. Thence I proceeded to Leeuwarden where it was with a difficulty that I was not a spy. An early start next morning brought me to Groningen, on the German border where the English prisoners are interned. My entry into this town was

FRENCH REPULSE TWO GERMAN ATTACKS

Allies Reported to Have Made Remarkable Progress at Arras and La Bassée—Attempts of the Germans to Cross the Canal Between Dixmude and Bixchoote Defeated by the Allies and Kaiser's Troops Driven Back Beyond the Bridges.

(By International News Service)

Foreign dispatch severely censured. Paris, Nov. 17.—The great artillery duel between the Germans and allies along the front in Belgium, from the coast to Ypres, is increasing in violence, according to this afternoon's official statement.

The Germans have been forced to abandon part of their trenches by the flood. Two German attacks were repulsed and the allies made remarkable progress at Arras and La Bassée.

Last night's official communication adds nothing in the way of news, simply saying:

"The situation is without modification."

The text of yesterday afternoon's communication follows:

"During the day of yesterday along the Yser canal, from Nieuport to the country up the river from Dixmude, the fighting was limited to artillery exchanges."

"The country having been further inundated, the advanced territory now stretches to the south of Dixmude to a point five kilometers (three miles) north of Bixchoote."

"The forces of the enemy which endeavored to cross the canal between the region of Dixmude and Bixchoote all were driven back beyond the bridges."

"To the southeast of Ypres two other German attacks were repulsed. On our part we have taken the offensive and reconquered certain points of support which the enemy some days ago succeeded in capturing."

"Between the Yps and the Oost there have been only operations of minor importance and partial progress made by our advance positions."

"In the region of the Aisne and in the Champagne country there have been artillery exchanges without result."

"In the Argonne the town of St. Hubert has again been attacked by the Germans, but with no success. In the region of St. Mihiel a surprise attack undertaken by the enemy against Arronville resulted in failure. There has been little activity in the Vosges."

Berlin Announcement Severe

Berlin, Nov. 17.—An official announcement given out in Berlin yesterday afternoon says the German attacks in Flanders are progressing slowly, but that in the Argonne the Germans have obtained further important successes. The bulletin says:

"In the western areas of the war both sides showed only moderate activity yesterday on account of the storm."

"In Flanders our attacks are progressing slowly, but in the forest of Argonne we have obtained further important successes."

Rich Pittsburgh Church Badly Damaged by Fire

(By International News Service)
Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—Fire this morning caused a loss of $50,000 to the Second United Presbyterian church.

Although the firemen worked hard nothing was saved from the building but the parson's library.

The vestry, auditorium and Sunday school rooms were burned out.

The congregation is one of the wealthiest in Pittsburgh, some of the members being widely known.

Carranza States His Conditions of Retirement

(By International News Service)
Washington, Nov. 17.—General Carranza has made known to Provisional President Gutierrez the conditions under which he will retire, and the latter has approved them, according to a dispatch just received by the department from Consul Sullivan.

This paves the way to a calm situation, although nothing is known at the White House regarding Villa's position.

Washington, Nov. 17.—President Carranza today sharply emphasized the fact that the United States will not pay over the million dollars collected in custom duties at Vera Cruz until a stable government has been established in Mexico, but will hold the money until all possibility of confiscation has been eliminated.

The president indicated to callers that, regardless of developments in Mexico, the United States will adhere to its plan of evacuating Vera Cruz on November 23, and emphasize the fact that requisite guarantees will be given all factions. No final word has come from Carranza and Villa as to whether they intend to leave Mexico.

Good evening! What's your private opinion of this sort of Indian summer?

Also, do your Christmas shopping early and avoid confusion.

Here's to the rosy-cheeked girl who doesn't get her roses from the drug store.

Always in the winter it is well to plan what you want to do when spring comes.

Pride goes before a fall, 'tis said. This year fall has something to be proud of.

Lord Roberts was an Irishman, a fact that should not be forgotten by Englishmen.

Clearfield was placed permanently on the map when one of its banks joined the federal reserve bank.

Still, we ought to be glad there are so many lame ducks; they might have been elected to office, you know.

The Ryan Democrats are to be recognized by the Democratic leaders after the election has been lost to the Democrats.

Bridge weddings are the latest. The bridegroom plays the prospector to see if the wedding fee shall be fifty cents or five dollars, eh?

Those districts adjacent to Clearfield and which share the honors bestowed upon the town should be part and parcel of the borough.

One of the results of the European war, according to a Berlin newspaper, will be the general use of the German language. Wot socks it?

The Kaiser has shown the upright ends of his mustache and now looks less as if he were challenging the world to knock the chip from his shoulder.

Southern congressmen declare that the administration owes the south much more than has been given it. Never fear; Wilson will take care of the south.

Also, the surrender of President Wilson to England in the matter of Panama canal tolls must have had something to do with the result of the election.

Under the public utilities law a plumber could be arrested for adding ten inches to a water spout without sending the specifications to the public service commission.

Southern Democrats are opposed to equal suffrage in their states because they do not want the colored woman's vote added to their present trouble of nullifying the colored man's vote.

A Mitchell Palmer is to be taken care of, which will cause the Ryan Democrats some joy, because it will take Mitchell out of his present position as boss of the Democratic party in this state.

Even the Indians of the plains have denounced the war in Europe. Is this because the war interferes with the wild west shows abroad or because the red men actually look upon bloodshed with horror?

Clearfield's Women's club must be different from similarly named clubs elsewhere, since none of the mean things the newspaper publishers are saying about women's clubs apply to the local organization.

What makes an editor feel good is to have some really intelligent citizen tell him he ought to print something which appeared in his paper at least a week previously. It shows that the citizen is anything but a close reader of the paper.

It is said that the American troops are to be withdrawn from Vera Cruz next week. President Wilson might tell the people of the United States what the troops were sent to Mexico for—to protect American citizens or to protect Great Britain?

REPEAL THE LAW

One of the first things the next legislature should do is to repeal the law creating the public utilities commission. There never was any cause for the creation of this commission, and since its membership has been made up of men who never have been in touch with the people and do not have any consideration for the people's welfare, the sooner the commission goes out of existence the better. It looks to most people as if the commission was brought into being for no other purpose than to harass municipalities and private corporations and to add the public service corporations to the list of the public.

It was supposed by the people that the public utilities commission would assist them in securing justice from extortion from public service companies, but the operation of the commission has proven that the private individual with a grievance might as well submit to injustice from the public service corporation as to expect relief at the hands of the commission. The law creating the commission actually prohibits anything like justice being done for the relief of the complaining citizen. Appeals to the commission for relief are useless unless the complainant has plenty of money and time to fight for his rights.

So many instances similar to that chronicled in the Progress yesterday about the Sunbury case and that in Clearfield have come to hand that the disgust of the people over the autocratic rulings of the public service commission has turned into anger that cannot be appeased except by the prompt repeal of the law creating the commission. There is a sufficient number of members of the legislature who are aware of the uselessness of the public utilities commission and who recognize the evils which flow from the operation of the public utility law to bring about the repeal of this obnoxious law, and the members from Clearfield county should unite with others in wiping this unpopular act from the statute books.

OBREGON'S LATEST

General Obregon, one of the numerous leaders in Mexico, has suggested to the Aguas Calientes convention a new plan for bringing peace to Mexico. This scheme is to have both Carranza and Villa agree to leave Mexico for some other land. Obregon is said to have assurances from Washington that if these two "generals" will consent to this plan the United States will protect the lives and property of foreigners in the republic. If Obregon has such assurances from President Wilson it is difficult to see how the president is going to make his guarantee good.

It is very doubtful if Villa will agree to anything of this kind. He believes that he has won the right to remain in Mexico and help form the new government. Carranza is a horse of another color, and might be persuaded to leave his native land to its fate if he were to be handed a full purse upon taking his departure. If both of these disturbing elements shall be removed from the scene in Mexico what assurance has the United States government that other leaders will not proceed to start other revolutions and menace the foreign residents of the country? To carry out his promise the president would have to send more American troops to Mexico and repeat the blunders of the past year.

SIX SMALL SMILES

Effect of the Cause.
"Won't your wife sing for us?"
"Sure; I just asked her not to."
Philadelphia Ledger.

Corrected.
"I understand you began your life as a newsboy," observed the friend smilingly.
"No," replied the millionaire.
"Someone has been fooling you. I began life as an infant!"—New York Times.

Awful Outlook
"Opera singers may enlist in this European war."
"Well, the slaughter will be dreadful if they turn upon the enemy the ferocity they commonly display toward one another."—Kansas City Journal.

Some Differences
Johnny (puzzled as to how to pronounce the name of an explorer).
Say, father, do you pronounce K-n-u-d with a long or a short "u"?
Father (who, of course, doesn't know).—

know)—Oh, it doesn't make any difference.

Johnny—Well, I guess it makes a good bit of difference whether a man is nud or nude up in the arctic regions.
—Penn State Froth.

Generous Consideration.
"Have you said your prayers?" asked the mother.

"Of course," replied the child.
"And did you ask to be made a better little girl?"

"Yes. And I put in a word for you and father, too."—Washington Star.

Sartorial Advantage

"There is something very picturesque about the Scotch costume."
"Yes. And it's economical, too. A man doesn't have to bother about keeping his trousers pressed."—Washington Star.

PEACE SONG

We are longing for the dawning of the day when war shall cease, When all over the earth's surface there shall reign the Prince of Peace; Then tyranny and greed for gain shall suffering ones release; Let Peace go marching on!

Let those who war would favor heed the mother's moans and tears, Let them think of orphaned children, wives whose lives are spent in fears, Of waste and ruin war has wrought through long and bitter years, Let Peace go marching on!

Send home the absent warriors, their vacant chairs await, Return unto the foundries the guns and armor plate, And use the men and money to build up home and state; Let Peace go marching on!

May friendly mediation settle all dispute and strife; May the ruler of each nation seek to save each subject's life, And receive the adoration of each mother, child and wife; Let Peace go marching on!

—Lucania Clark Shea in Our Dumb Animals.

A New Daughter

A new daughter arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Whitteman, at Punxsutawney Saturday. The parents and Uncle Horace, of Clearfield, are getting along as well as could be expected.

GIRL VICTIM OF HYDROPHOBIA BITTEN YEAR AGO

Miss Grace Polhemus

New York, Nov. 17.—The most remarkable case of hydrophobia on record is that of Miss Grace Polhemus, thirteen years old, who is now in the worst stages of the dread malady. A newly discovered serum—a combination of quinine and urea hydrochloride—has failed to make any appreciable change in the condition of the little patient. It was November 19, 1913, that she was bitten by a cat she picked up on the porch of her home and tenderly fondled.

Protect Your Health by Pasteurizing Milk

The prevalence of the foot and mouth disease as reported among cattle in various sections of Pennsylvania may effect the dairy herds. Should these become infected there is danger of the transference of the disease from infected animals to human beings through the milk. As the records in this state show this possibility Dr. Samuel Dixon, commissioner of health, has issued the following warning: "The foot and mouth diseases which is known to the medical world as aphthous fever, is highly infectious in cattle and manifests itself by a rising temperature and the appearance of blisters on the mucus membrane of the mouth, tongue and nose. The blisters are followed by ulcers; digestive disturbances are also common. Death seldom occurs in human beings. As a matter of protection against the possibility of infection the use of raw milk may be discontinued. A safety factor is to pasteurize the milk. Following is a simple method which may be used. "Place a saucer in a pan seven or eight inches in diameter and pour the same height. Set the milk bottle in this. Remove the paper cap from the milk bottle. Pour in the milk a sufficient quantity to make warm water to half cover the bottle. Watch the water and as soon as it has boiled twenty minutes remove the bottle of milk and allow it to cool slowly. Never place the milk immediately upon the fire or the bottle may break. Seal the bottle with a new cap, a supply of which you can obtain from the milk man, and place the milk bottle where it will remain at a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. It must be kept cool and clean if it is to remain safe for use. If the milk supply is not received bottled secure a bottle of the same size and cork after sterilization."

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, waiting, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the preaching thunderstorm and to the turbulent peeling of a great organ below.

She had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the music drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irrevocable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; and, unconsciously there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to wait her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones ried with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the law estate had vast holdings of land the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind. With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements. But these became momentarily stronger and more confident.

This, then, was the secret he had hungered to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stultic motionless—strongly enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated the descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers feet, clanking busily to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen money and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the stick-like hand upon his shoulder and shrunk back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As if from the path of some great visitant from the world beyond the grave, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, the threat of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the vision, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged man standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to his eyes.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land. A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance flashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the priest in the hand of Seneca Trine, scattering the weapon even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doctored her mourning for a gown less somber and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse in charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt—in absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physicians lied—must soon regain consciousness. Kneeling beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer a tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window, where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something," Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness. "I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding, in fact—and kept it to myself, not knowing whether I ought to tell you or not."

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly, unhappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be it's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . See here . . ."

"Well?"

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably. "You see, he loved her so—I thought—I'm sure it would be best—if you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed but Judith. And that's skating so close to the truth that it makes no difference the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been killed."

After a long pause, the girl asked him quietly, "I understand. But is it possible you don't understand that, if I were to consent to this proposition, I lend myself to a deception which I must maintain through all my life to come—Alan would consider me his wife?"

"Well—but you see—you are his wife . . . Oh, don't think I'm off my bat. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. You are Alan's wife."

No listen to me. You remember that day in New York when you substituted for Rose, when Alan tried to elope with her, and you went with him to Jersey City, and stood up to be married by a preacher—named Wright—and Marrophat broke in just at the critical moment and busted up the party?"

"Well?" she demanded breathlessly. Barcus produced a folded yellow paper from his coat pocket and proffered it.

"Read that. It was handed to me as best man, just before the ceremony. Seeing it was addressed to Alan and knowing he was in no frame of mind to be bothered by telegrams, I slipped it into my pocket and forgot all about it temporarily. When I came to find it, I took the liberty of reading it. But read it for yourself."

The typewritten lines of the long message blurred and ran together almost indecipherably in Judith's vision. None the less, she contrived to grasp the substance of its meaning.

"WHY DIDN'T YOU WIRE ME SOONER?" it ran: "MARRIAGE TO ROSE IMPOSSIBLE. REV. MR. WRIGHT INFORMED ME YOUR MARRIAGE TO JUDITH LAST WEEK HAD GONE TOO FAR WHEN MARROPHAT INTERRUPTED. JUDITH LEGALLY YOUR WIFE. WOULD HAVE ADVISED YOU SOONER HAD YOU LET ME KNOW WHERE TO ADDRESS YOU. HOPE TO HEAVEN THIS GETS TO YOU BEFORE TOO LATE."

The message was signed with the name of Alan's confidential man of business in New York.

When Judith looked up she was alone in the room, but for the silent patient on his couch.

Slowly, almost fearfully, she crept to his bedside and stood looking down into the face of her husband.

And while she looked Alan's lashes fluttered, his respiration quickened, a faint color crept into his pallid cheeks—and his eyes opened wide and looked into hers.

His lips moved and breathed a word of recognition:

"Judith!"

With a low cry of tenderness, the girl gank to her knees and encircled his head with her arms.

"Judith," she whispered, hiding her face in his bosom, "Judith is no more . . ."

A pause; and then the feeble voice: "Then, if I was mistaken, if you aren't Judith, you must be Rose—my wife!"

She said steadily: "I am your wife."

His hands fumbled with her face, closed upon her cheeks, lifted her head until her eyes must look into his.

And for many minutes he held her so, looking deep into the soul of the woman.

Then quietly he said: "I know . . ."

THE END.

STORM WRECKS EXHIBITS AT PENN STATE COLLEGE

State College, Nov. 16.—Following the hoodoo that struck the football team of the Penn State college on Friday, the 13th, a violent windstorm late Friday night swept over the agricultural fair grounds, demolishing five large tents and destroyed the exhibits they sheltered. This show, which was to have been the feature of the second day of the Pennsylvania Day celebration, was immediately cancelled.

The students of the agricultural school, under whose auspices the fair was to have been held, were dismayed Saturday morning when they came to the fair grounds and found cabbage, candy and corn from wrecked exhibits scattered over the field. The debris was weighed down with corn cobs and poles. Interest of visitors and student body immediately shifted to the horticultural show of fruit and vegetables in the new hall, cultural building. There, in charge of the Crab Apple club, of the agricultural school, were exhibited thousands of prize specimens of apples, pears, and vegetables grown in the field and under glass. Prizes were awarded for exhibits from all over the state that measured up to a specified standard. Forty commercial growers of fruit and thirty vegetable growers were represented in the show.

At the new engineering building dedicated Saturday night at 8 p. m. was attracted by exhibition of electrical devices, "safety first" appliances and the automobile show. Hundreds of visitors thronged the building all day.

The cattle show, scheduled for today, was cancelled because of the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease.

OBITUARY

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Ursula Manahan were held in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ray Litz, on Dorey street, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. B. J. Hummel, pastor of the U. B. church, assisted by Rev. E. C. Reeve, of the Presbyterian church of Clearfield. Interment was made in the Mt. Joy cemetery by Undertaker Leavy.

Mrs. Manahan was the widow of Ephraim Manahan, who departed from this life about five years ago. She was aged 57 years 2 months 19 days. She was the mother of 15 children, 5 sons and 10 daughters. Three sons, William, Martin and Al, and 3 daughters, Sarepta, Ella, Jane, Cora and Linda, preceded her to the spirit world. The following children, 2 sons, Joseph, of Ohio, and Reuben, of Clearfield, and 5 daughters, Mrs. George Peillon, of Altoona; Mrs. Victor Condrict, of Sandy Ridge; Mrs. Daniel Litten, Mrs. Ray Litz and Mrs. Lillian Graffin, all of Clearfield, with 20 grandchildren, and 3 sisters, Mrs. Gragler, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Richards, to mourn their loss, which is her gain.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready to use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Fine Mess of Venison

The editor of the Progress returns heartfelt thanks to the members of the Crystal Springs Rod and Gun club for a mess of venison received at his home last evening. From scrapple to venison is a long jump, but the editor is likely to survive the change of diet.

HE CLIMBED A TREE AND MISSED THE BUCK

A "other good story" comes from the Crooked Run club's camp. One of the hunters at that camp went out the other morning and thought he would be in a better position to see a deer if he were at an elevation, so he climbed a tree until he was about thirty feet from the ground. Here he waited patiently and was finally rewarded by seeing a handsome big buck trotting in his direction.

When the deer had approached within hitting distance the hunter fired at it, but unfortunately for him he missed and the buck disappeared in the bushes. The hunter was filled with chagrin that he had lost an opportunity to get a deer and his disappointment was almost great enough to lead him to return home at once. Because of his high standing in the community and through consideration for his family the name of the club's ing hunter is suppressed.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD COULDN'T RESIST BUCK'S CONFIDENCE

If the story coming from Larrys Creek is to be believed, Judge H. W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, who assisted Judge Bell in the local court some months ago, could have killed one of the biggest bucks ever seen in this section of the state, had he so desired. As the story is told, Judge Whitehead was one of a party of hunters and was stationed on a watch looking a few feet from him, down the runway, the judge's gun was raised and the deer kept on looking and stopped a little to nip at a twig. This was too much for his honor to stand and the gun was lowered. Again the deer looked at him and continued to nip a few choice bits. This continued for about five minutes and the judge raised his arm at the animal and in a manner that seemed to say, "I know you will give me a chance," the beautiful creature walked slowly away, and after a while disappeared down the runway.

PET DEER KILLED BY UNSPORTSMANLIKE HUNTER

What is considered by hunters in this vicinity as a most unsportsmanlike act was committed at Westover on the first day of the deer season. While the parties alluded to kept within the law, having hunters' licenses issued in Clearfield county, they killed one of the bucks bought from Mrs. Mosser last year by the state. At the time it was impossible to capture all of the deer bought and about twenty were driven over into Cambria county. Some of them went back, and have stayed around the park. Mr. Wagner, the keeper, says they were tamer than the ones in the park he saw every day, and killing one of them would be like killing a calf.

When the deer season came, the warden of Clearfield and John Johnson, of Patton, got together to devise some scheme to protect them, but as they were in Clearfield county and open to hunters, there was nothing to do, but they hoped the true sportsmen would not kill any of the deer.

The deer turned loose in the park were so tame all summer that they came into the farmers' barn yards with cows, but since the rabbit season came in, with the sound of shooting and the baying of hounds they are nervous.

soon noted by the authorities and a gendarme mounted on a bicycle was told off to watch my movements. I entered a cafe overlooking the barracks in which the British prisoners are housed and my sleuth-hound kept watch and ward at the door. How to get a picture was my chief thought and while the gendarme kicked his heels in the street I perched my camera on the ledge of an upper window and got the Britishers marching in the barrack square.

Leaving the cafe I went to the barracks, the gendarme following at a respectful distance. The officer refused to allow me to take pictures of the men, but they were anxious that I should not be sent away empty handed. Placing my camera on the ground and tilting it with a stone beneath the front end, I sat upon the machine and while ostensibly chatting to some of the sailors I was turning the handle and taking a picture of the squad of sailors running up and down the barrack yard, as they do for exercise for two hours each day.

This is the only recreation which the Britishers get. They are not allowed outside the confines of the barracks for they have refused to give their word of honor not to escape if the opportunity presents itself. Indeed, several of them, aided by friends outside, have succeeded in getting free.

The fact that I was taking a picture of the men at exercises was hidden from the officer-in-charge by the fact that the men gathered round me and screened my action, but it did not escape the attention of the gendarme and his intervention resulted in a request that I should leave the barrack yard without delay. I was politely told that the use of my camera was forbidden and a not very appetizing picture of a woman in a Dutch jail was verbally painted for my benefit. Still being under police supervision, Groningen ceased to appeal to me and under police escort I went to the railroad depot and took train for Flushing. A camera in Holland is an object and while not openly antagonistic, the authorities are determined to take no chances of allowing anything to happen which may reflect unfavorably upon their neutral status.

FELL FROM BRIDGE AND IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Anthony Yaruski, a miner employed at Curwensville, fell from the bridge at Susquehanna Sunday night about 10 o'clock, alighting on the ground and being instantly killed.

Yaruski and several companions were walking over the bridge when he tripped and fell. The body was taken to Ramey for interment. The dead man was about 27 years old and unmarried.

TWO PERSONS BURNED BY EXPLODING COAL OIL

Two persons in this county were severely burned by explosion of coal oil on Saturday. Philip Pifer, who resides between Luthersburg and Troutville, poured oil on a fire and the coal oil can exploded. He was badly burned about the face and arm.

Mrs. Charles Rogers, of DuBois, also tried to hasten a fire in the stove with coal oil on Saturday. Her hands and face were severely burned.

DELANVAN'S COMET NOW VISIBLE TO NAKED EYE

Astronomers of the naval observatory, at Washington, are observing with keen interest the activities of Delavan's comet, which is now visible to the naked eye and will remain visible throughout November.

It may be seen about ten o'clock on clear nights at a point almost directly below the Pole star. At that time the comet is low in the sky. As the night wanes the comet rises higher in the heavens and in the early morning, between two and four, it reaches its greatest altitude above the horizon. Then, it is said, is the best time to observe the comet.

MANHATTAN PLAYERS DRAW BIG CROWD LAST NIGHT

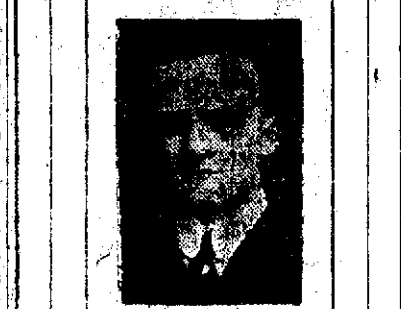

The opera house was packed from pit to dome last evening for the opening show by the Manhattan Players, who will present a well known and successful show here every evening this week. Last evening they presented the four act sensational political comedy "The Man of the Hour." Vaudeville performances were given between the acts.

This evening they will play "Tess O' My Heart," a play from the popular back of that title, which has attracted wide attention and been considered one of the biggest successes in the theatrical stage in recent years.

PROMOTING PRIZE FIGHTING UNPROFITABLE BUSINESS

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Special to Progress.)

New York, Nov. 17.—The fight promoters ought to get together and form a little trust for the purpose of thwarting the fighters in their efforts to get about 99 44-100 percent of all the money that is taken in at the box office.

Promoting prize fighters in this thriving metropolis and in other cities is just as profitable as raising chickens in one's back yard, since the fighters started demanding guarantees and huge percentages.

Billy Gibson, connected with the fight game in New York for many years, quit it a short time ago. Gibson was regarded as the most successful fight promoter in the East—and also the shrewdest. Yet Gibson quit the game in disgust and gave out figures to show that the fighters get nearly all the money taken in at the gate and that the promoters get little and sometimes nothing for their efforts.

"Conditions are bad now but they will get worse," said Gibson. "Those fighters each day are yelling for bigger guarantees or bigger percentages."

Gibson staged the Willie Ritchie-Leach Cross fight in New York last winter. The house was packed. The fight drew nearly $22,000. Every body figured that this would mean a harvest for the promoters. When the fighters were paid, when the other bills were paid and when the State Boxing Commission got its share there was just about $1,000 left to be split among the members of the promoting club. And this $1,500 was their gross divvy. The club that Gibson was managing had spent hundreds of dollars to land that fight.

A new crowd of promoters headed by James J. Johnson is conducting fights in Madison Square Garden now. When they entered the field they figured that they could make money. They had the idea that bulky profits could be made "if the thing is run right." They thought other promoters had failed to grab profits because they didn't manage things as they should be managed.

Johnson staged Freddy Welsh-Ad Wolgast fight here. It was expected that the house would be about $20,000. Instead it was slightly over $13,000. The state's share was nearly $700. The cost of printing, hall hire, police hire, usher hire, publicity, advertising, electric lights and other incidentals was nearly $2,500 according to the best figure obtainable. Johnson put on some first class preliminaries. He had to pay about $400 for them. Welsh got $4573 for his share of the receipts and about $400 in addition "for railroad fare and training expenses." Wolgast got $3266 for his 23 or 24 minutes of work, and also he got about $200 to $300 for extra expenses.

Figure all these items up and you will find that Johnson and his associates, who worked night and day to get the bout and who worked about 20 hours a day after they got the bout so as to make its staging as perfect as possible, got just about enough net profit for their efforts to enable them to go out and buy themselves two or three soda waters and a nice, new 50 cent necktie.

ANNUAL DONATION DAY AT CLEARFIELD HOSPITAL

The Womens Auxiliary of the Clearfield hospital desires to call the attention of the public to the Eighth Annual Donation.

In view of the generous response to the recent "debt raising campaign" it has been thought best to omit, for this year, the customary house-to-house appeal for contributions. The need for renewed supplies is, however, always urgent, and such articles as jellies, canned fruits, groceries, coal, kindling wood, soap, old muslin, etc. will be gratefully welcomed at any time.

The week beginning November 23 has been fixed as donation week, and the different places of business have kindly offered to deliver at the hospital all goods purchased from them. All other donations may be left at the hospital or the following named residences: Mrs. Frank Fielding, South Front St.; Mrs. W. I. Swope, Second and Pine Sts.; Mrs. H. B. Powell, J. P. O'Loughlin, Front St.; Mrs. A. H. Woodard, Locust St.; Mrs. G. J. Moore, Hillside; Mrs. John Baratti, East End; Mrs. Ezra Brown, Weaver St.; Mrs. Alfred Graham, West Market St.; Mrs. Frank G. Harris, West Fourth ave.

Mrs. Frank Fielding, President, Womens Auxiliary.
Mrs. Blanche Biddle, Treasurer.

WARNING TO CITIZENS FROM BOARD OF HEALTH

Diphtheria is now epidemic in many of the smaller towns near by; Ronksman, Glen Richy, Allport and Blooming are affected. It will therefore be wise for those persons visiting these places from Clearfield to use every precaution not to come into contact with cases of diphtheria and avoid contracting the disease or carrying infectious material. The only two cases of infectious disease reported in the borough in the past two months have been diphtheria. We should use every precaution to avoid the spread of this malady.

The toilet of the nose and throat should be carefully attended to. If there are coughs and colds, the throat should be treated. Irritation of the throat and inflamed tonsils should receive attention, as such mucous membranes furnish an excellent soil upon which the diphtheria germs will rapidly multiply and cause the membrane to form, with full development of the accompanying symptoms. Where doubt exists, call your family physician early. Fear of quarantine should not influence you. A physician will not suggest quarantine unless he conscientiously believes it necessary. We should all be willing to abide by the quarantine measure as this offers our chief weapon in the prevention of general epidemics. During the public health terms contagious disease may become epidemic in a remarkably short time. It therefore requires the utmost vigilance to arrest any apparent outbreak. We ask the assistance of every citizen in this most laudable undertaking.

RAILROAD

BIG STEEL BRIDGE IS PLACED IN POSITION

With no interruption to traffic, a 450 ton steel bridge on the Charlotte Boulevard, Rochester, N. Y., over the Belt line of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway, was placed in position at midnight, November 10.

The new bridge, which carries the boulevard over the railroad tracks, has a span of 52 feet and including a sidewalk, is 43 feet wide. The floor of the bridge was paved with concrete, sand and brick before the bridge was placed in position. The bridge was constructed by the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway company alongside of the old structure and at midnight was drawn into place by steam winches, in less than half an hour.

When the abutments of the old structure have been cleared away, there will be room for three tracks under the boulevard, the extra track being demanded by growing traffic on the Belt Line. The old bridge, which was built in 1889, weighed 16,000 pounds, while the steel work alone, in the new bridge, weighs 147,917 pounds.

The bridge, together with the trolley bridge, which was placed at the same location some ten days ago, gave employment to a large gang of men for several months and to the credit of those in charge, be it said, not a man was hurt on the job.

Fare Increase Justified.

Authority has been granted to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the Central railroad of New Jersey by the Interstate Commerce commission to charge a higher rate for through passenger tickets from New York to the west than the aggregate of the intermediate fares to certain designated points. The through fares, in any event, are not to exceed those established by the Pennsylvania railroad to and from the same points. The fares, thus adjusted, will be on a basis of two and a half cents a mile. The through rate from New York to Chicago was recently increased; the new rates authorized are to make intermediate fares conform to that basis.

CORRESPONDENCE

CLEARFIELD R. F. D. NO. 5.

Misses John Stone, Geo. Litz and Edward Brown will leave on Tuesday for the mountains where they will spend a few days deer hunting.

Blake Statistics was a visitor at John Stone's last Saturday.

Reports from the deer hunters of this section are that they have not killed any yet.

"Andy Learns to Swim." Andy hated water. His idea of a thorough toilet was to dip one finger in a basin and then rub it with a towel. His mother did her best to correct Andy's unsanitary habits. Then he learned to swim and entirely lost his dread of water and also saved the life of a little friend.

"The Mandolin Players and the Willing Performer," an amusing comedy. Fred's green cousin comes to the city to pay him a visit and he takes him calling with him, warning him before hand not to do certain things. Fred behaves in his usual manner and makes more friends than his dignified cousin.

"If at First You Don't Succeed." Jack and Mable disagreed. They decided to get a divorce. The lawyer announced to their consternation that they were not legally married because the minister had failed to report the wedding. They decide that the only way to get a divorce is to get married first. Just as Joseph Mease, of Weaver street, who has been very ill.

Richard Sheno called on West Side friends Saturday evening.

We are all glad to see Dr. Nevins improving his Plymptonville properties with a new coat of paint, and the color of same is quite pronounced.

Thomas Taylor, of Brockville, arrived at Harry Kees on Sunday evening and will spend a week hunting for deer.

Archer Orden hardly has time to eat and feed his stock now. He said, "Oursen? Two pretty young ladies in the neighborhood, who are not strangers to Archer a yucca."

Geo. Lunsberry moved to Andersonville on Saturday into one of the new cottages just completed.

The funeral of Mrs. King, an aged and respected resident of Mapleton, near town, will be held this afternoon.

Mrs. George Voysey is a daughter of the deceased.

The repairs to the Y. M. C. A. room are being rapidly pushed to completion and it will not be many days until the men and boys will be enjoying the benefits of the association.

There will be a cottage prayer-meeting tonight at the home of John Carson, in "Frenchtown", and on Thursday night at the home of John McManamy, on Elizabeth street.
